Battling ongoing transportation challenges, in September 2023 Prince George's County Public Schools (PGCPS) contracted 4Mativ Technologies to provide a transportation audit for a cost of $210,600. At the start of this school year PGCPS implemented numerous changes including bus stop locations, distances between them, walking zones and, most significantly, school start and end times. The school system also changed its parent information portal and grade center from SchoolMax to ParentVUE/ Synergy (see the June 20, 2024, issue). With all the changes, their decision to keep the unpopular and frequently non-functioning StopFinder seems baffling (for more on StopFinder see page 6).

PGCPS' five-year contract for over $1.3 million with Transfinder, creator of StopFinder, shows it was paid for by another company, BusPatrol, a company that was accused of bribery and corruption by Maryland Delegate David Moon in a 2023 committee hearing. In order to understand why BusPatrol pays for the app, one

Musk's Dismantling of USAID: The View from Greenbelt

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

This week, three of several Greenbelt residents who work for the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) agreed to speak with the News Review about their experiences as Elon Musk attempts to dismantle the agency they work for. All USAID employees we reached out to feared reprisal and we are using aliases to protect their identities.

David (not his real name) lives in Greenbelt and has worked for USAID for 15 years. He works in the Bureau of Humanitarian Assistance (BHA). "We're like FEMA for the rest of the world," he explained. "So whenever there's a natural disaster or a conflict or a humanitarian crisis outside of the United States we respond to them." USAID has direct hires, civil servants and institutional services contractors (ISCs) who work for a company but are embedded in USAID. There are also personal services contractors (PSCs) who have a direct contract with the government and act like an individual company, explains David. He's in the latter category.

Democratic lawmakers including Senator Chris Van Hollen, at center, gather for a press conference outside the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) headquarters in Washington, D.C., on Monday, February 3. Melissa said the emails came from opm.gov addresses that didn't make sense. One email instructed recipients to trust emails from that address. Metadata also shows the

by Susan Taylor

Members of the Greenbelt Municipal Swim Team, many in tiedye and green team attire, fill the council chambers on Thursday, January 30 for a town hall about the upcoming pool renovations and closure.

Greenbelt City Manager Josué Salmerón hosted a Town Hall on Thursday, January 30 to answer questions and address concerns about upcoming repairs to the indoor pool at the Greenbelt Aquatic & Fitness Center (GAFC). The Town Hall served as an informational follow-up to the city council worksession on January 22 (see the January 30 issue).

Director of Public Works Brian Kim, Recreation Director Greg Varda, Assistant Director of Recreation Andrew Phelan, GAFC Director Stephen Parks and City Councilmembers Jenni Pompi and Amy Knesel rounded out the panel. The council chamber, live and virtually, buzzed with members of the community, many of whom are associated with the Greenbelt Municipal Swim Team (GMST) - Go Barracudas!

Project Scope

Kim outlined the scope of the construction project - structural, mechanical, electrical, plumbing and retiling of ~3,000 square feet - scheduled to run 120 days. By planning for closing the indoor pool from April 7 to September 28, the project team has built contingency and flexibility into both the work scope and budget in case any additional unseen damage is revealed.

Will Greenbelt Police Assist In Immigration Enforcement?

by Diane Oberg

At its January 27 regular meeting the Greenbelt City Council discussed several aspects of the impact of the Trump administration's increased deportation efforts, recognized Black History Month and International Holocaust Remembrance Day and heard an update on the status of the city's animal control services.

Immigration

Former councilmember Judith Davis raised the immigration issue during Petitions and Requests, noting that on January 23, Acting U.S. Secretary of Homeland Security Benjamine Huffman issued a directive giving U.S. Department of Justice law enforcement agencies, including the Marshals Service, the "authority to investigate and apprehend illegal aliens."

Davis pointed out that the Greenbelt Police Department has a partnership agreement with the U.S. Marshals Service and expressed concern that this agreement will cause the city police force to be "called up to do these violation of city policy. Davis asked that this concern be added to the list of issues being discussed by the city government.

Letters to the Editor

Thanks to Reporter

I'd like you to know that Erica Johns did great coverage of Chelsea Wood's no-heat situation. I felt very comfortable discussing the situation and answering her questions. She was very thorough and followed up with me to make sure I was accurately quoted. She continued to follow the story. Half of us have not had heat all season. When we went through our first cold spell in November, we felt abandoned. We couldn't get in touch with the board and the management company wasn't helpful. Government officials were not very helpful either. All we could do was turn to the media; it was coverage by Erica and other reporters bringing the situation to light that pushed the responsible parties to do something.

As of this evening (Thursday, January 30), tentatively we all have heat. I am in the last building to get it. We've had heat for a few hours; I'll be more confident once we've had it for at least 24 hours. I will certainly notify Erica if failures occur.

Take care and keep up the great work. I read the Greenbelt News Review regularly!

The Brutalist

Escaping post-war Europe, visionary architect László Toth (Adrien Brody) arrives in America to rebuild his life, his work and his marriage to his wife Erzsébet (Felicity Jones) after they had been forced apart during wartime by shifting borders and regimes. On his own in a strange new country, László settles in Pennsylvania, where the wealthy and prominent industrialist Harrison Lee Van Buren (Guy Pearce) recognizes his talent for building. But power and legacy come at a heavy cost. The film won three awards at the Golden Globes and has received 10 nominations for this year's Oscars. Said critic Ty Burr of The Washington Post, "For [director] Corbet, a film - this film - is its own reward. It offers more than enough rewards for us as well."

Nickel Boys

Elwood Curtis' (Ethan Herisse) college dream shatters alongside a two-lane Florida highway. Bearing the brunt of an innocent misstep, he's sentenced to the netherworld of Nickel Academy, a brutal reformatory sunk deep in the Jim Crow South. He encounters another ward, the seen-it-all Turner (Brandon Wilson). The two Black teens strike up an alliance: Turner dispensing fundamental tips for survival, Elwood clinging to his optimistic worldview. Backdropped by the burgeoning Civil Rights Movement, Elwood and Turner's existence appears worlds away from Rev. Martin Luther King's burnished oratory. Despite Nickel's brutality, Elwood strives to hold onto his humanity, awakening a new vision for Turner.

Novel Endings Open House: Find a New Literary Love

On Saturday, February 15 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., the Novel Endings Book Room in the Greenbelt Library, offers a Blind Date with a Book. Discover a new literary treasure with this exciting activity. Each pre-wrapped book comes with a hint to pique a reader's interest. Unwrap the mystery date and embark on a new reading adventure. It's all the fun of a blind date, without the jitters.

This is also an opportunity to support young readers. Novel Endings is currently seeking donations of children's picture books and juvenile books. Bring gently used children's books to the Open House, receive stickers and praise as a thank you.

The used book room, Novel Endings, is located in the back of the Children's Department inside the Greenbelt Library. Enter through the main entrance, walk to the left of the circulation front desk into the children's section (look for the blue Novel Endings donation box on the wall to the left of the desk), and continue toward the back of the Library.

The Open House is a chance to meet the Friends of Greenbelt las 10:30 a.m. en el Centro Library. Chat with volunteers, browse the wide selection of books and enjoy the fun.

Novel Endings raises funds to support the Library's outreach, programming and staff enrichment, and promotes the Library's mission. Books are offered for suggested minimum donations.

Book Donations: Novel Endings welcomes donations of likenew fiction, history, memoirs, science, sci-fi/fantasy, gardening, cooking and spirituality/reflective books, with a focus on books that appeal to the public at the Greenbelt Library. They work with online booksellers for more specialized titles.

To donate books (by appointment only), email friendsofgreenbeltlibrary@gmail.

Black History Month Events at the Library

The Prince George's County Memorial Library System is celebrating Black History Month with over 75 free programs and events to give library customers of all ages a lively and engaging experience centered around the heritage and community of Black culture in Prince George's County and beyond. Here are two events happening at the Greenbelt

On Saturday, February 8 at 1 p.m., the Library offers Jazz Journeys: From Blues to Now, presented by Muneer Nasser, a trumpeter and jazz historian. Explore the rich history of jazz through live music, rare recordings and interactive demonstrations – perfect for teen and adult music lovers and history enthusiasts interested in discovering jazz's Memphis blues roots.

On Saturday, February 15 at 1 p.m., the Library hosts the Underwater Archaeological Slave Wrecks Project presented by Kamau B. A. Sadiki of Diving with Purpose, in conjunction with the Greenbelt Black History & Culture Committee and the Prince George's County Office of Human Rights. Sadiki will discuss the archaeological underwater research of the Slave Wrecks Project of the Smithsonian's National Museum of African American Culture and History in partnership with the Izeko Museum of South Africa, George Washington University and Diving with Purpose.

Bilingual Story Time At SHL Rec Center

On Friday, February 14 at 10:30 a.m. at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center, RUAK (Random Unselfish Acts of Kindness) with the Prince George's County Memorial Library System will present engaging, lively stories and activities for young children and their caregivers to help build early literacy skills. This monthly program is an introduction to reading aloud to children as a way to instill the love of literature. After the readings, the children can stay and play with balls in the gym. There will be free children's books and free healthy, nutritious snacks. Come, and spread the word to friends and family.

Los Niños Leen y Juegan

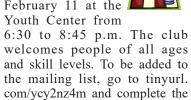

El viernes 14 de febrero a Recreativo de Springhill Lake, RUAK (Random Unselfish Acts of Kindness) con el Sistema de Bibliotecas Conmemorativas del Condado de Prince George's presentarán interesantes historias y actividades divertidas para niños pequeños y sus cuidadores, para ayudar a desarrollar las habilidades de alfabetización temprana. Este programa mensual es una introducción a la lectura en voz alta a los niños como forma de inculcar el amor por la literatura. Después de las lecturas, los niños pueden quedarse y jugar con pelotas en el gimnasio. Habrán libros infantiles gratis y aperitivos saludables y nutritivos. Como dijo un padre al irse, "Fue muy bueno!" Unete a nosotros, y corra la voz a amigos y familiares.

Unplugged Monthly Game Night Moves

Greenbelt Unplugged has moved its monthly game night to the second Monday of the month. Meet at the Community Center from 7 to 9:30 p.m. (room varies, check at the front desk). The next event will be Monday, February 10. Games will be available or bring favorites to share. For questions email events@greenbeltunplugged.org.

Kevin Kincius

Kevin Kincius

Kevin Gerard Kincius, 61, of Greenbelt, died at Holy Cross Hospital on Friday, January 24, 2025, after an almost three-year battle with prostate cancer.

He lived his entire life in Greenbelt where he participated on the following teams:

Greenbelt Boys & Girls club football, Greenbelt Little League baseball with the Orioles and Greenbelt's Finest softball. Kevin also coached/managed adult coed softball and played goalie for Greenbelt co-ed soccer team. Within the Greenbelt co-ed adult leagues, he was on multiple championship teams.

Kevin enjoyed daily walks and runs through Greenbelt, watching golf, the Washington Capitals hockey team and NASCAR on television. He also relished time with close friends Thomas Noël, Donnie Dorsey, Mark Opsasnick and Joe Hawk.

Numerous times he traveled to Fort Ashby, W.V., to attend the famous Greenbelt Annual Maggs camping trip the first week in March.

Kevin retired September 30, 2024, after serving 36 years as a letter carrier at the University of Maryland. He toiled part-time for Greenbelt Recreation Department for many years.

Each Sunday after Mass he visited his mother.

Kevin was preceded in death by his father, Kazimer and nephew, Ryan Brown.

He is survived by siblings

Remembering Joe Mack

Thank you to Rick Ransom for his tribute to Joe Mack Schubert. I worked at Greenbelt Aquatic & Fitness Center (GAFC) from 1993 to 2002 and had the pleasure of seeing Joe Mack regularly. As he once told Hot Rod magazine, he never saw his injury as a handicap - and he truly lived that way.

He would graciously decline offers to have a door held open for him, often turning the gesture around and offering to hold it himself. He would roll past my office with a cheerful hello, pull up at the deep end of the pool and push himself forward into the pool, coming to the surface with a big grin. At the end of his swim, he would haul himself up

A steadfast vocal supporter of the GAFC staff during challenging times, I will always be grateful.

RIP Joe Mack Schubert – you were an amazing human being.

Two Public Forums on County Cur neighbor Development Issues Saturday

This Saturday, February 8, Greenbelters can participate in two forums on county development. The later but closer one, from 1 to 3 p.m., will focus on areas along Kenilworth Avenue between Carter's Lane and Good Luck Road. It will take place at St. Bernard's Church, 6700 St. Bernard Drive in Riverdale. Or, from 9:30 a.m. to noon, join a forum on areas around Route 450 between the Baltimore-Washington Parkway and the Beltway, to be held at the West Lanham Hills Community Center, 7700 Decatur Road in Hyattsville.

One topic will be rules protecting the environment and consideration of the effects of redevelopment on transportation. Other topics include what zoning allows, how community voices are heard and the process for approving or amending development proposals. Another issue is how more walkable, transitoriented communities get created and obtain needed infrastructure investment and amenities that are wanted.

Both forums are sponsored by County Council Member Eric Olson, in collaboration with the Prince George's County Planning Department. Light refreshments will be served. For details, email Karen Guzman at keguzman@ co.pg.md.us or call 301-952-

Our condolences to the family and friends of Kevin Kincius who died on January 24. During his life in Greenbelt he enjoyed participating in several sports.

Congratulations to Fiona O'Brien who was named to the 2025 USA Acrobatic Gymnastics Junior National Team. Fiona is currently in eighth grade and was featured in our July 11, 2024, issue. She will be representing the USA in Bulgaria this spring.

Our thoughts are with all our neighbors impacted by the turmoil at the U.S. Agency for International Development and other federal agencies.

needs to look at another contract that diverts millions of dollars in traffic fines (for vehicles not stopping for school buses) away from the county and to that same private company, BusPatrol.

TransFinder Contract

The contract with TransFinder to use their StopFinder app (obtained through a Maryland Public Information Act (MPIA) request) shows that in 2020 PGCPS committed to a five-year contract, whose stated cost was over $1.34 million. It was paid in full by the company BusPatrol. The News Review attempted to find out if PGCPS was obliged to use Trans-Finder in order for BusPatrol to pay for the StopFinder contract or if alternatives were considered. PGCPS' Director of Purchasing and Supply Services De'Nerika Johnson told this newspaper to file a public information act request, though it's unlikely that information is in public records. BusPatrol's website lists Trans-Finder as a "Technology Partner." Following the five-year contract PGCPS has the option of continuing to use TransFinder at an annual fee of $123,287, paid for by BusPatrol, according to the

BusPatrol's Agreement

On May 1, 2023, then-chair of Prince George's County Council Edward Burroughs sent a budget overview memo that noted an increase of $4.9 million over the previous year's budget. "The increase is primarily due to increases in operating costs to support the new School Bus-Arm Camera safety program in partnership with Prince George's County Public Schools," states the memo's Budget Overview. "The $6.5 million increase in the School Bus Stop Arm program expenditures in FY2022 is a result of the agreement between the Prince George's County Public School System and BusPatrol (the vendor). BusPatrol is paid a contracted fixed 'Technology Fee' of $400 per month for each school bus that is equipped with a BusPatrol Camera. The fee is continuous with the operation of the program," it states in the Facilities and Operating Revenues and Expenditures section.

An FY2023 chart summarizing the revenue and expenditures of the School Bus Stop-Arm Camera program shows a gross profit of $8,354,818.80 from violations. From that amount BusPatrol is paid $6,662,811.28 in processing fees. After other expenses, PGCPS itself makes a net income of $597,444.77, dwarfed by BusPatrol's share of over $6.6

Concerns about Contracts

report for Montgomery County Public Schools (MCPS) raised concerns about their partnership with BusPatrol. That five-year contract began in May 2016, with five annual renewal options, and allowed BusPatrol to install and operate cameras, which BusPatrol would own and maintain, on MCPS school buses. According to the report, BusPatrol's cameras would also be able to "monitor the conduct of drivers and students inside the bus along with global positioning units to track the buses."

The audit states that according to a July 2019 report from the Montgomery County Office of the Inspector General (OIG), "The OIG initiated the review in August 2018 after the County was made aware of concerns regarding the vendor's history of prior convictions involving fraud and bribery in another state where it operated a similar program. Although the report disclosed that employees of the County or MCPS did not violate a rule, law, or procedure, or had any inappropriate relationship with the vendor, the report identified the following two findings related to the County:

- 1.) The business case for this program was built around the desired use of a predetermined vendor rather than an objective analysis to design an effective and economical method to achieve an identified outcome.
- 2.) County officials relied, at least in part, on information provided by a criminal conspirator in vetting the vendor and they continued to rely on vendor supplied information when considering the future of the program."

In addition to the concerns of the OIG report, Maryland's Office of Legislative Audits said it "received an allegation on our fraud, waste, and abuse hotline that MCPS had entered into a contract to place monitoring cameras on school buses that diverts fines to a private entity when they should be paid to the County." "Based on our review, we were able to substantiate the allegation as the contract provided that all funds were to go to the vendor until the vendor recovered its cost of investment," stated the audit. Finding 10 of the audit report on MCPS is that: "MCPS contracted with a vendor for a school bus camera system without a competitive procurement process or a fixed total cost to be paid. In addition, the contract lacked sufficient details to enable effective monitoring of the amounts invoiced and paid to the vendor."

BusPatrol's Corporate History

Maryland Delegate David In September 2022, an audit Moon, speaking at an Environment and Transportation Committee hearing on House Bill 849 in 2023, cited the findings of the audit of MCPS, raising concerns that BusPatrol was "convicted of bribery in another state" and "flagged by a DLS audit that Montogomery County's procurement was flawed, and no bid, and didn't have proper controls ..." In response BusPatrol issued a public statement that they had "purchased intellectual property stemming from a now-defunct company (Force Multiplier Solutions, or FMS) that developed nascent school bus stop arm enforcement technology. That defunct company unfortunately had certain individuals in corporate leadership who violated the law. None of those individuals work for or are even associated with BusPatrol. We strongly condemn the actions of these individuals as they are not representative of anyone at our company or our mission to protect students on their journey to and from school." Records show that in 2019 the CEO of FMS was sentenced to seven years in federal prison for what the United States Attorney's Office, Northern District of Texas, described as "a bribery scheme that took down multiple public officials and precipitated the collapse of Dallas County Schools."

Future Plans

PGCPS was asked if they plan to renegotiate a better share of the over $8.35 million in revenue from fines from the county's school buses with BusPatrol and if BusPatrol will be involved in selecting the next transportation management system and bus tracking app or paying for them, since the five year contract ends this year. Johnson told us to file a public information act request, though since we were asking about future plans for these contracts that information won't be available in public records. The News Review reached out multiple times to every person listed under PGCPS' Media Inquiries and Public Information team, for whom we also left messages, with the exception of Director of Communications Meghan Gebreselassie, whose mailbox was consistently full. On MondaySenior Public Information Specialist Lynn McCawley answered our call to her cell phone and said she'd get back to us but hadn't by time of press.

Understanding the Significance And Opposition to StopFinder

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

At the start of the 2024-25 school year Prince George's County Public Schools (PGCPS) had several significant changes in place to improve their longstanding difficulties with transportation, most significantly, school start and end times. PGCPS had contracted 4Mativ Technologies to provide a transportation audit for the cost of $210,600. But amidst all the "transportation enhancements" rolled out, one thing remained the same: StopFinder, an app opposed by parents and school board members alike.

If you do not have children who take the bus to school, you might wonder about the importance of the StopFinder app. It tracks school buses, potentially down to their GPS location so that parents know in real time where a bus is on its route. That kind of technology can help a family make it to the stop when the bus comes early, and see where their child's bus is when they haven't made it home from school at the expected time. When there's no driver available that day, which happens when there's an illness, for example, due to the general driver shortage, the app can let parents know that no bus is available before they leave their children standing at the stop in the morning. When buses ran an hour or more behind schedule during snow delays, the app was supposed to let families know the expected arrival time so children didn't have to stand in freezing temperatures wondering if a bus would come at all. Despite the promise of the technology, StopFinder fails to deliver.

Terrible Record

For years, large numbers of parents have testified and complained that StopFinder doesn't work - on parent forums and groups, to their representatives and at board of education meetings. At the March 2024 school board meeting when numerous transportation changes were announced, board members warned the administration that their constituents wanted something other than StopFinder (see the April 4, 2024 issue). At that time the administration spoke of a "rebranding" and fewer doubled routes, which they said had been causing problems for the app.

School Board Members' Opposition

In April 2024, PGCPS Director of Transportation Keba Baldwin said they would "open up" more options in the app to use capabilities they hadn't yet.

See STOPFINDER, page 7

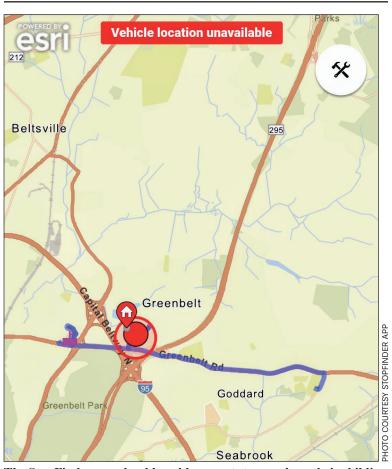

Geese land on the frozen Greenbelt Lake on January 27.

The StopFinder app should enable parents to see where their child's school bus is in real time but the vehicle location is rarely available.

Board Member Pamela Boozer-Strother (District 3) was skeptical, having heard it before. Board Member Branndon Jackson (District 6), who has since been elected chair of the board of education, said he wanted to go on record opposing Stopfinder. "I don't know what rebranding we can do. No. We need to look for other opportunities ... There's other companies out there ... I just want to go on record so my community knows that I'm saying that we don't want Stopfinder," he said.

Coleman responded that the administration could consider alternatives in 2025-2026 but didn't want to change too much in the upcoming year and "leave our community behind." "I feel like we're already behind with Stopfinder," retorted Jackson. Board Member and then-Vice Chair Lolita Walker (District 9) said, "I think every community has heard about Stopfinder. As a parent I'm on the picket line about Stop-finder myself." She asked that PGCPS carefully communicate the optimization of a tool that "we already know parents are beside themselves about." She told the administration they'd have to educate the public when they "keep things the same that aren't necessarily working."

Then-Board Member Kenneth Harris (District 7) (who lost reelection in the fall) agreed, "Our communities do not want Stop-Finder," but he believed changing it was not a conversation they could have at this point.

Despite promised improvements, problems with the app continue this school year. In December 2024, StopFinder announced a "simplified view" that would no longer display the bus trip path or other stops. Parents objected, saying they would like to know which stop the bus was currently at, as it is helpful to know if the bus is approaching and also because a student who misses a bus might be able to catch it further on.

In January 2025, PGCPS shared an "Update on StopFinder App Issues," apologizing for the inconvenience caused by technical issues. "Our team is actively working with the vendor to identify and resolve the issue as quickly as possible," said the update on January 29. In fall 2024, families had been advised to use "geo alerts" to know where their children's buses were, a function the system said was being automatically created for all accounts in their message on December 16, which also announced the "simplified view." As of February, Greenbelt families reported the app is displaying "Vehicle location unavailable.'

In response to questions about why PGCPS left behind their previous app, Here Comes The Bus, which parents reported as useful and reliable and why they persist with StopFinder despite objections and ongoing problems that make it unusable for some, the News Review looked into PGCPS' contract with TransFinder, StopFinder's parent company, in another article this week (see page 1).

Chelsea Wood Condos at Last All Finally Have Enough Heat

by Erica Johns

Heat was restored to the last four of 47 buildings in the Chelsea Wood condo complex on Thursday, January 30. Buildings 8489, 8491, 8493 and 8495 Greenbelt Road had no heat this heating season until now, being in the half of the complex where the first of two underground pipes broke in October.

Missing Welder

Residents of those buildings were notified January 25 to expect repairs to their building to be carried out on Monday, January 27. However, delays excavating the broken pipe and securing a second welder when the first didn't appear meant that heat was not restored until January 30.

What Next?

Metropolis' heat restoration message listed the repairs completed up to that point, including two boilers, two underground pipes, two domestic water pipes, one drain pipe and burst pipes in six condos. They wrote that after restoring heat to all units, they would proceed to address repairs needed throughout the complex because of past leaks. Metropolis did not respond to a News Review query to describe those repairs or plans to substantively address Chelsea Wood infrastructure.

Home Again

Resident Jessica Fomalont told the News Review that she appreciates Metropolis making it a priority to restore heat, and doing so within one month of becoming Chelsea Wood's management company. She also appreciated the excavators and HVAC companies who worked in frigid temperatures on the pipes and boilers.

Fomalont said she is relieved after spending three winter months without heat. She can work from home, no longer forced to go to her Washington, D.C. office every day for warmth. Fomalont said that what is important to her as a condo owner is having control over her own environment. She said the lack of heat removed that sense of control, making her uncomfortable in her own home. Now, she says, "It feels like my home again."

Buildings 8489, 8491, 8493 and 8495 Greenbelt Road in the Chelsea Wood condo complex were the last four of Chelsea Wood's 47 buildings to have their heat restored.

Update on Parkway and Crescent Apartments Still Without Heat

On Monday, February 3, City of Greenbelt Community Development inspectors reinspected the 54 apartment units in the Parkway Gardens and Crescent Pointe Apartment buildings which have been without adequate heat. According to Public Information Officer Chondria Andrews:

- 35 citations were issued.
- Two units were found to be in conformance with interior temperature requirements.
- Nine units' tenants were satisfied with their heat and declined inspection.
- Eight units are vacant and will not be occupied until the heating issues are resolved.

Community Development staff reported that technicians are on site making repairs to two of the three boilers, hoping to have repairs completed by the end of the week, barring unforeseen problems. Information on the status of repairs to the third boiler is expected by the end of the week.

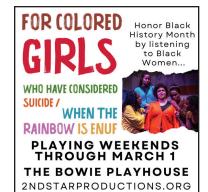

Dreyfuss, the apartment management company, is encouraging any residents with concerns about the temperature of their units and/or temporary heat sources to contact them directly.

messages are coming from outside of the government, says Melissa. She believes they are coming from a server installed by a non-OPM group, employees of Musk, some of whom have been given positions with the Department of Government Efficiency (DOGE). "It's a coup! Legitimately, that's what it is. The government is not being run by the government right now. It's being run by associates of Elon Musk. I don't think it's an exaggeration to say that elected officials are not in charge, they're not the ones making the decisions and the ones implementing them are not the civil service," she says.

Immediately following the inauguration, USAID employees received a directive email informing them that Diversity, Equity, Inclusion and Accessibility (DEIA) programs were being discontinued and their DEIA colleagues had been put on administrative leave. They were also told to report any DEIA programs or workers attempting to hide their work under different names. The email was signed by someone they later found out was their new acting administrator, David reported. Melissa said she spent the week removing keywords from documents, to a point of absurdity where phrases such as "diversity of opinion" were being flagged. The impact of this is huge she said, since the federal government is seen as a leader, and industry across the country looks to it and follows suit.

Melissa said she was instructed to close programs relating to DEIA by day two, something that wasn't possible. "You can't just shut it off. There's a whole process you have to go through to close out an award. ... at the same time they're shutting off all the spigots to make sure no funding goes out - funding doesn't go out this time of year anyway; we have a funding cycle," she said. The "spigots" being shut off are the same ones that are needed to close things out, she explained, describing a bottleneck in the agency's awards. It's "un-implementable," she said. "It's not possible to get things out the door and at the same time we're still dealing with the whole 'you can't send emails.' They all have to go through the head of the agency. ... It's absurd. It's bizarre."

There's been an outcry over funding freezes for domestic grants and foreign aid and subsequent announcements of exceptions and waivers, Melissa notes. "Word like that has gone out but those spigots I was talking about still have not been opened so no funding is going out for the things they've announced. ... It's just PR lies," she says.

Week of January 27

On Monday, January 27, David was in morning meetings when an ISC he works with started receiving emails telling them to stop working and go home. "About 700 of those people, a week ago Monday, were sent home," he told the News Review. The rest of the workers, including civil servants and PSCs, like David, were left there, thinking, "Okay? We just lost about a third of our workforce," he said.

Melissa confirmed, saying, "Last week we were told to shut down all the institutional contracts, which is about a third of the USAID workforce."

David says one of the things those who remained started to do was to communicate with each other outside of work, something they didn't regularly do before. On the night of Sunday, February 2, somebody commented to David that they were unable to get into their USAID account. When he checked he found he couldn't get into his email, either. "So, they were just shutting down our emails Sunday night," he said. "They were shutting down the PSCs by turning off their emails. There was no communication. There was no, 'Hey we've decided we're gonna put you all on administrative leave.' ... I still don't know what's going on. I just know I don't have an email," he said Monday. His contract is for one year and is renewable four times, a way of giving a five-year contract that's reviewable annually, he explained. There is a clause that allows for the government to cancel the contract with 15 days' notice. "But they haven't done that," he notes. "We haven't heard anything. I still don't know what's going on except what I hear on the outside," says David. "No one's communicated to us anything. ... But I do have a contract that's signed by a U.S. government contracting officer," he says. David said his supervisors said they didn't know anything.

On Friday, January 31, DOGE and Musk employees had arrived at the USAID headquarters in Washington, D.C. and tried to gain access to classified areas, the Sensitive Compartmented Information Facility (SCIF). Security personnel who attempted to stop them were placed on administrative leave. By Saturday, the group had gained access to the SCIFs. On Sunday, February 2, Musk, now head of DOGE, announced on X, "USAID is a criminal organization. Time for it to die." Later, on the same platform, he gloated, "We spent the weekend feeding USAID into the wood chipper. Could gone to some great parties [sic]. Did that instead."

Week of February 3

Speaking with the News Review on Monday, Melissa said of the PSCs, "They've all been locked out. But no one knows who locked them out. The people who have the authority to do that have not been notified." Alarmingly, many of those overseas are PSCs, she noted. She had to fill out information about the PSCs in her unit but wasn't told what it was for, though "we didn't imagine anything good was going to happen," she said. We're duty bound to follow due process. We wouldn't just strand people. I don't know any civil servant who would do that. We all take this very seriously. And if we're comfortable disregarding the law then we're not fit for the position." Yet they've been given instruction that Executive Orders are to supersede law and policy where they conflict, "which is egregious," she says. "We're demonstrating contempt for the law, which is appalling. That's not the way any civil servant I've ever worked with behaves. That's insane." Their general counsel and ethics lawyers have been put on leave, she says. "All the means of recourse are being shut down," she says.

Up until Thursday of last week Stephanie thought they were preparing for a 90-day review of the agency. Since then, things have been unpredictable, though it makes sense they'd fire the ethics lawyers first, she said. On Monday she arrived at her office, which is not in the headquarters, around 7:30 a.m. A little later she and a couple of colleagues already there started to get messages from other colleagues that they weren't being let in. They prepared themselves for being removed. But instead, the colleagues downstairs were let in and she stayed in the building the whole day. On Tuesday she participated in a union meeting. She was encouraged to know people were trying to help them. We just want to do our work. We're all so mission driven. We believe in it," she said. "This does not make America safer, stronger or more prosperous. It's risky for all those things." This week it's heartening to see people start to speak out and pay attention, she said Tuesday. "There's not a lot of trust being built. We think of ourselves as the good guys," she told the News Review.

What's Next?

Those who spoke to the News Review expressed concern for their colleagues abroad. BHA has people in Washington, D.C. managing responses, David said, but also people abroad in Thailand, Ukraine, Kenya and Israel. "It's putting people in harm's way. ... These people who are out there doing their job one day wake up and they're no longer being supported by their organization. They're not sure how they're going to get home," David said, noting some were posted overseas with their families. "People were saying, 'I don't know how me and my children are going to get back.' Because nobody's communicating. It's all just, 'Shut it all down.' It's really one of the most incredibly stupid things I've seen in my entire life," he said. "It's like it's not thought out. It's just this guy [Musk]."

Melissa says there are USAID workers in Ukraine cut off from their USAID access now: "No one will answer their calls, they don't have access to their email, they don't know how they're getting home, they're stranded in a war zone." The same is true of people involved in evacuations immigration enforcement by enacting municipal legislation, in addition to the existing police general orders.

Robert Goldberg-Strassler asked that council support state legislation seeking to protect those who are in peril these days. The Protecting Sensitive Locations Act would restrict the reach of immigration raids in places such as schools, places of worship and hospitals.

City Manager Josué Salmerón reported that city staff are working on a series of actions to inform the public of their rights and what level of protection they have in schools and places of worship, including the Know Your Rights page mentioned above. The city sent this information out through its digital channels and sent an email to 14,000 subscribers. Salmerón said they are also working with CASA of Maryland to organize Know Your Rights information sessions. However, he said, they want to be discreet, and the events will not be advertised as a town hall.

Recognitions

Mayor Emmett Jordan issued a proclamation to members of the Black American History Committee proclaiming February to be Black History Month in Greenbelt. He also recognized Goldberg-Strassler, who noted that January 27 is International Holocaust Remembrance Day, commemorating the day that the Auschwitz death camp was liberated by the Soviet army in 1945. His grandparents, he said, were exterminated there 80 years ago. He offered a Hebrew prayer in commemoration.

Admin Reports

Salmerón reported that Animal Control will be back in full operation on February 3. The city has also secured a $9,000 grant to help residents obtain spay/ neuter services. Salmerón noted that $9,000 will not cover all such needs, and funding will be available on a first-come, firstserved basis.

He also gave an update on the efforts to restore heat to two apartment complexes in Greenbelt Center. This issue was covered in detail in the January 30 News from the Congo due to Ebola. "And that's an accompanied post so there are people with schoolaged children," she notes, "whose access has been terminated in the middle of an evacuation. So they're stranded ... in Brazzaville, so not even in their homes. I don't know how they're paying for accommodations. We're taking away their government resources and not flying them back home. It's in everybody's contract. You can't strand somebody like that but nobody's getting any responses," she said.

Melissa also said shutting down USAID is costing lives and dismantling systems that can't easily be brought back. She gave the example of the program FEWSNet, a famine early warning system: "There's not been a significant famine in any country where it reports data. And it's gone, we're not funding it anymore, just on a whim and it saves probably millions of lives. Every year it saves lives." Tracking of diseases will be impacted, too. One of the people they just froze as a PSC was the deputy in charge of the Ebola response that's ongoing right now, she says. "There's going to be a lot of hardship as a result. "It creates gaps. ... China is actively trying to move into this space and we're creating a huge vacuum and opportunity for that. And [stopping] a lot of the work we do in Eastern Europe or Central Asia, that's creating opportunities for Russia, as well. ... There are places where we've been actively competing with Iran," says Melissa. "You know, USAID is a national security agency and that's not just for show. The work that we do makes America more safe and when we pull out, it creates more unstable environments there. Are

He also worried about the ripple effect on nongovernmental organizations who won't be able to pay employees, including some who live in Greenbelt. without USAID support. David, Melissa and Stephanie all believe dismantling USAID is a test case. "I'm sorry for the United States," says David, "because if they're doing this to us today, you know, NASA's going to be next. ... I think it's just starting."

Melissa also worries about the information being handed over to a private citizen, "a private citizen with known strong ties to China and Russia," she notes. "There's already been irreparable damage done," she says of the information and data in Musk's

she said. "I'm hoping that we'll get some congressional action to stop some of this or at least slow it down," she said Monday, noting Democratic members of Congress were at a press conference outside the USAID headquarters that day but were denied access to the federal building.

On Tuesday evening, Stephanie was placed on administrative leave. She received an email along with everyone else from her D.C. office. They were then locked out of USAID systems.

Hours later, Melissa received an email from internal comms@ subscribe.usaid.gov. "On Friday, February 7, 2025, at 11:59 p.m. (EST) all direct hire personnel will be placed on administrative leave globally, with the exception of designated personnel responsible for mission-critical functions, core leadership and specially designated programs," it read. Essential personnel expected to continue working would be informed by 3 p.m. on Thursday, February 6, it stated. For those posted abroad, the Department of State is preparing a plan "with all applicable requirements and laws" to arrange and pay for return travel within 30 days and "provide for the termination of PSC and ISC contracts that are not determined to be essential," it continued. Exceptions would be considered on a case-by-case basis, said the email. "Thank you for your service," it concluded. It was unsigned.

Young, Bold and Brilliant: Celebrating Black Artists

by Diya Shah

The Greenbelt community came together to celebrate young artists of color at the reception for the Citywide Art Exhibit on Sunday, February 2. Held at the New Deal Café, the event featured a vibrant collection of visual art, a live monologue performance and a welcoming space where attendees could sit, eat, talk, mingle and engage in meaningful conversations that honored Black history and artistic expression.

Organized by the Greenbelt Black History & Culture Committee and curated by Shaymar Higgs, the executive director of The SPACE: Free Art for All, the exhibit highlights the power of art as a form of resistance, healing and cultural preservation. Among the art pieces from young Black DMV creatives was featured artist Songu Mbriwa, a 33-year-old painter from Sierra Leone who traveled to the U.S. to share his work and advocate for greater recognition of African artists.

"Whenever I'm painting, it's like a therapy for me – I'm in my happy place," said Mbriwa, a completely self-taught artist. His pieces, ranging from biblical themes to depictions of everyday life and people, captivated attendees with their incredible realism and bold colors. One of his standout works was a striking portrait of a chimp named Romio, inspired by a real-life encounter in his home country.

Mbriwa spoke about the limited opportunities for art and artists in Sierra Leone, where access to materials is scarce, art galleries are nonexistent and society doesn't value art as a career. When he was younger, Mbriwa used dust and charcoal and created wherever possible. "Art is my calling," he explained. "I just want to keep [art] alive and just keep going."

In addition to the visual art on display, the reception featured a powerful performance by Tar'El Barnes, a 16-year-old student at the Duke Ellington School of the Arts. He performed a monologue from Blacktop Sky by Christina Anderson, a play that is geared toward the Black community, but that Barnes says, "has a universal message that can be used within any community."

Higgs also took time to talk about the work his arts nonprofit does to empower emerging artists and the power of community. "I love that everyone's here right now," Higgs said. "Show up for the people, the younger ones especially."

Following the speeches, attendees were encouraged to eat, drink and connect with one another. The remainder of the event was filled with lively conversations, laughter and the exchange of ideas – a true reflection of community building in action.

The fitness wing and locker rooms will remain open, with normal hours.

Varda, Phelan and Parks each stressed their hopes that the out-door pool will open earlier in the season than usual, with longer hours each day, but that depends on yet-to-be-made Prince George's County Health Department decisions.

Resident Tom LeaMond asked about the usable life of the planned construction. Kim replied that these project repairs should last 15 to 20 years.

Community Spirit

Pools and recreation have been at the center of community-building since Greenbelt's beginning, as gathering places where residents can meet and play. Many residents use the pools daily and seasonally, for health, therapy, fitness, learning, sport, relaxation and fun.

Varda stated, "We know how important the pool is to the community – many different users." The project planners are strategizing to offer "something for everyone – what they like or need to do best."

Parents, coaches and former swim team members credited the swim team ethos for nurturing community connections and civic engagement in the young folks whose lives it touches.

Current city leadership responsible for planning this project emphasized a spirit of cooperation in this period of transition. Christine Nickel, GMST treasurer, added, "We want to work with you guys, we're not trying to say swim team members are the only people who have a stake in this – we just need to know how to help you."

Salmerón referred to the uncertainty of the current status at this point in the project. "I'm sure it has been inducing anxiety." The planners have been "exploring options – and considering, finding a balance – where we can figure out a way to work" for all the community stakeholders.

Pointing to the complexity of that balancing act – serving all the members of the pool community, strategizing safety, liability and sharing space – Varda assured the audience, "You're not going to lose the pool. We're going to figure it out, we're just not sure what that looks like at the moment. We're going to be resilient."

After listening to questions and answers, LeaMond pointed to the "good synergy – expressing needs and working to meet needs" between the planning team and the user groups of the pool.

Museum Hosts Lecture Feb. 20 On Norfolk Botanical Garden

In celebration of Black History Month, the Greenbelt Museum is hosting a free talk at 7 p.m. on Thursday, February 20 by Martha M. Williams, who will dive into the rich history of Norfolk Botanical Garden, Virginia's largest public garden. Hear the untold story of how, through Franklin D. Roosevelt's Works Progress Administration, 200 African American women and 20 African American men worked to clear swampland and transform it into the botanical garden. Learn also how a group of local middle schoolers helped identify many of the original gardeners whose legacy was unknown. From there Nathaniel Cody will describe the garden of today one full of nationally recognized collections that continues to grow and bring people from all walks of life closer to nature. This is a virtual event to be held via Zoom, and advance registration is required eventbrite. com/e/breaking-groundthe-wpa-original-gardenerstickets-1207662814989. An email with a Zoom link will be sent prior to the date of talk. The event is sponsored by the Friends of the Greenbelt Museum and the City of Greenbelt.

Speaker Bios

Martha M. Williams is a retired educator, who grew up on the family farm in Southampton County. Family farming gave her a deep appreciation for working the land. She enjoys both beautiful farms and all types of gardens. During her career as an educator she served on many community service projects including leadership on various boards. Serving on the Norfolk Botanical Garden board of directors provided her with an opportunity to participate in the unfolding history of the garden.

After hours of collaboration and research, she published WPA Original Gardeners in May 2016. In January 2023, she published First Gardeners for young children

Nathaniel Cody is a longtime resident of Hampton Roads who attended Menchville High School and Virginia Commonwealth University, where he received a bachelor's degree in sculpture and extended media, with a minor in mass communications. While attending college, he managed two senior art shows for Virginia Commonwealth University, curating and managing over 200 student artworks while fundraising for all operation costs. He is currently the digital content creator for the Norfolk Botanical Garden. Since college he has explored different occupations and brings expertise in many areas of nonprofit operations, marketing, corporate relations, social media, curating, community relations, project management and interdepartmental relations. Cody still finds time to be actively involved in the community and served on multiple boards: Stonewall Sports Norfolk (chaired) and Hampton Roads Pride (chaired). He is on the Garden's President's Council on Inclusion and Diversity.

GAFC passholders will be offered a range of choices during the closure and construction period. Membership for pool-only people can pause during the closure, and expiration dates will be extended. Once the outdoor pool opens, those passholders will be given 30 days to decide if they want to swim outside or pause their membership.

Retaining Staff

Varda praised Parks and the "marvelous" lifeguarding staff of the GAFC. He asserted that summer lifeguards will be hired, as well as retaining existing guards and managers. The project team is anticipating full staffing for a hoped-for early completion of the project, and the possibility that both pools will be open in late summer.

Parks reinforced that lifeguards are recruited, trained and hired year-round. Lifeguarding classes can be held anytime there is a cohort of recruits.
